

STRANGE LINE-UP OF FACTIONS IN CHICAGO, CHARGE

ANDREWS URGES COMMISSION TO STUDY DRY LAW

Prohibition in Every Aspect Should Be Investigated

Washington, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Creation of a commission to study the general prohibition question in all its aspects was proposed today by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury in charge of dry law enforcement.

With both senate and house preparing to take steps to inquire into conditions under prohibition, and with wet and dry organizations engaged in bitter controversy over it, Mr. Andrews declared he believed the time had come for a thorough study of the question in its economic social and other phases.

"To Quiet Public Mind"

Unwilling to make an estimate of the various efforts of the law himself, the secretary declared that if enforcement was to proceed with success "some action must be taken to quiet the public mind."

Mr. Andrews emphasized that it was his business to enforce law rather than judge its benefits or disadvantages, and he suggested that the study be left to a commission, to be appointed by the President, which would have trained experts and wide industrial powers.

Enforcement of the law so far, he said, has not been a fair test of the working of prohibition and a fair test could be made until a judiciary and police sufficient to carry out the law is available.

Complaining against the continuous agitation against the law, the assistant secretary said this was responsible for the social trend of drinking. He said he hoped for the time when hostesses would apologize for serving liquor rather than for not serving it. He added that if improvement of enforcement continues as at present the time would come when the hostesses could apologize for the quality of the liquor at last.

Michigan Starts Suit

Against Sister State

Lansing, Mich., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Attorney General A. B. Daugherty today filed a separate suit in the United States Supreme Court in behalf of Michigan against Illinois and the Chicago Sanitary District in an effort to halt diversion of water from the Great Lakes through the Chicago drainage canal.

The bill requested that the supreme court restrain Illinois and the Sanitary District from reversing or obstructing the natural flow of the Chicago river to prevent its flowing into the Great Lakes.

"In commencing suit, I have undertaken to protect the rights of Michigan and its people in the greatest inland waterway in the world," Mr. Daugherty said.

Old Law Gave Memphis
Crowd Free Movie Show

Memphis, Tenn., Mar. 1.—(AP)—More than two thousand men, women and children enjoyed a free picture show here yesterday when the manager of a local theater announced he would test the Sunday blue law. The crowd had assembled and when the police also arrived the manager decided to let the patrons in free. The city attorney ruled that motion pictures without admission did not violate the law, so no arrests were made. The manager announced he would further test the law next Sunday, but did not say whether admission would be charged.

Gasoline filling stations throughout the county remained closed, however, out of respect to the 123 year old state statute.

RESERVATIONS TO COURT MAY NOT BE TAKEN

Jurists of Several Countries Favor Rejection

Geneva, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Jurists of several European countries favor either rejection of the reservations attached to America's adherence to the permanent court of international justice, or at least a court ruling as to whether they will necessitate amendment of the court's statutes according to information reaching league of nations circles today.

The jurists in question have examined the reservations in an unofficial and independent status and their conclusions merely represent personal views.

Meanwhile the members of the court are awaiting official notification of the American adherence. It is pointed out that its early receipt would afford an opportunity for an exchange of views among the delegates to next week's special league assembly.

AFFLUENT HOST
FEEDS STUDENTS OF HOBO COLLEGE

Stranger Refuses Any Information as to His Identity

Chicago, March 1.—(AP)—Students of the Hobo College are curious—but not too curious—about the identity of an affluent stranger who has been dropping in regularly every day for a week and inviting them to lunch.

On Monday he invited six men to eat with him. They ate and the stranger paid. On Tuesday he invited twenty. Came Friday and the college attendance had increased to fifty and all were fed.

Still undismayed the stranger stepped into the college at the close of a lecture yesterday by Dr. Arthur Holt of the Chicago Theological Seminary and explained that as it was Sunday he would take everybody present to lunch. He had 300 guests when he reached a restaurant.

The man, according to Dr. Ben Teltman, one of the college sponsors, refused to tell who he was.

Hobo College of West Madison St. is the habitat of great numbers of Chicago's transients. Organized a couple years ago with Dr. Teltman, champion of the cause of the unfortunate, as one of the guiding spirits, the college offers daily lectures on the social and economic subjects and also maintains a reading and recreation room for its students.

Anti-Italian Feeling in Austria Continues Growth

Vienna, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Sentiment in favor of the Tyrolese, as against the Italians, continues active. Mass meetings were held throughout Austria yesterday. In Vienna an immense crowd of pro-Tyrolese manifestants sought to deliver a resolution censuring Premier Hamek for "your feeble attitude," but was scattered by the police.

SIX EXPEDITIONS
WILL SEEK NORTH
POLE THIS YEAR

International Race to Reach Unknown Territory Is On

New York, Mar. 1.—(AP)—At least six expeditions to reach the North Pole, new to find new lands hidden away in the fields of unknown ice, hope to start this summer. Four other purely scientific expeditions will penetrate far into the north.

It has become almost an international race. By land, sea and air expeditions representing interests in America, France, Norway, Italy and Russia will penetrate the regions that lure countless explorers before them.

The expedition led by Lieut. Commander Richard E. Byrd plans to sail from New York late in March in its effort to blaze an air route to the Pole itself. Last Saturday the dirigible Norge, with Norwegian and Italian members of the expedition headed by Roald Amundsen aboard, made a successful test flight at Rome.

Of the three American expeditions the first that will take the air under present plans is that headed by Captain G. H. Wilkins, Australian explorer, now on its way north. This expedition is backed by the American Geographical Society, the Detroit Aviation Society and the Northern American Newspaper Alliance. The chief purpose is to seek an unknown land believed to lie north of Alaska and Siberia.

Another American expedition headed by Lieut. Leigh Wade, American round the world flier, also seeks this mystery land but in addition seeks to make a round trip flight to the Pole.

The expedition is supported by Alumni of American universities, its personnel and equipment being all American.

The Byrd expedition, backed in part by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Edsel Ford also seeks this unknown land.

An expedition headed by Harrison Williams backed by the American Museum of Natural History and George E. Palmer Putnam, publisher, will cruise the seas about Greenland to obtain scientific data.

A party from the University of Michigan led by Professor William H. Hobbs will explore Greenland itself.

WOMEN WITH MACMILLAN

Wiscasset, Maine, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Two women will brave the Arctic waste when Commander D. B. MacMillan heads his next expedition into the frozen north. They are Mrs. R. B. Metcalf of Providence, R. I., and Miss Maude Fisher of New York.

MacMillan's objective on this voyage, which is to start in June, is to last three months for the search of the Norse relics in Labrador, Greenland and Iceland. Rowe B. Metcalf of Providence will accompany the explorer on an auxiliary schooner now being built at Thomaston, and Mrs. Metcalf will go with her husband. Miss Fisher, a cousin of Mr. Metcalf, plans to make the voyage as companion for Mrs. Metcalf.

Slayer of Daughter's
Betrayer Took Own Life

Fairfield, Iowa, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Brooding over his indictment on Friday for first degree murder as a result of the killing of Sam McNeese, whom his 14 year old daughter had named as her betrayer, Louis Bruye yesterday welcomed death as a result from vengeance of the law and judgments of his fellow men.

In his cell in the Jefferson County Jail, the body of the 59 year old father was found hanging by two towels knotted together into an improvised noose. His trial was to have opened Tuesday.

On the morning of Dec. 6, Young McNeese was summoned to the Bruye home and shot to death as he sat in a chair and admitted that intimate relations had existed between himself and Bruye's younger daughter.

Soft Weather Damages
Brick on Lincoln Way

The "soft" weather of the past several days, which has brought the frost out of the ground, has "raised Ned" with the brick pavement on the Lincoln Highway east of Sterling, mountains and valleys appearing in many places. It is said the brick, when laid by Sterling township, was placed right on top of the old dirt roadway, which may account for its condition now. The pavement has been taken over by the state and will be repaired by the maintenance department.

March Came in Just Like that Proverbial "Lion"

March came in just like the proverbial lion.

Which, according to that old belief, indicates that it will go out like a lamb, thereby insuring an early and auspicious spring.

High winds, which continued throughout the night, accompanied the birth of the month, and a few flurries of snow livened the scene.

Sunday was a wonderful spring-like day, a beautiful farewell which February handed us.

Dollar Day Great
Events for Crowds
of Eager Shoppers

Fair bargain Saturday unsurpassed bargains offered by Dixon merchants and the completeness of the circulation of The Telegraph overcame the handicap of bad roads in many parts of this territory and drew to Dixon one of the biggest crowds of shoppers that has ever participated in a Dollar Day Carnival here. From early in the morning until late at night every store which participated in the Dollar Day price-slashing was crowded with shoppers, and from every hand came reports of an unusually successful trade day.

NINETEEN YEAR OLD GIRL GAVE
SERMON ON AIR

Has Never Danced With a Man; Tells Her Main Beliefs

Chicago, Mar. 1.—(AP)—In the little Iowa town of Promise City, Pattye Horn, pretty 19 year old preacher, guides a flock of 100, speaking twice a week from the pulpit of the Christian church.

Last night, Iowa's youngest preacher who "has never danced with a man" and who frowns on moving pictures, addressed a congregation that numbered thousands and advised them to dream.

"Be a worthy dreamer and your life will be a benediction to your fellow men," she spoke into the microphone of a Chicago radio station. Faith, courage and perseverance are requisites to a realization of the dreams of youth, she said.

Prior to her radio sermon, Pattye sat in her suite in her hotel and talked on many other topics, from the Bible to the Charleston.

"Perhaps my views seem old fashioned here in Chicago," she said. "I don't believe in dancing, nor do I think men and women should smoke, certainly not attend what you call petting parties. Sleigh ride parties in winter, outings on the lake in summer, church socials all the year round, games and picnics—these should take the place of the modern dance hall and theater, Miss Horn believes.

Nothing Else to Do

"Young people get to go on wild parties because they have nothing better to do, not because they want to," she continued. "Social service, brotherly love, and Sunday school work eventually will draw them in to the right channels."

Miss Horn is a sophomore Bible student at Drake University, Des Moines, and also is taking courses in evolution and biology.

"But of course I don't believe in evolution," the youthful pastor hastened to add. "I take those courses so as to teach my people what not to believe."

Outside of church work she finds her greatest pleasure in reading. After meeting the "right young man," she intends giving up her career and devoting all her time to her home.

"Women have no business in business after marriage," she insisted. "The girl went into the ministry a year ago. Last Easter her father was taken ill and Pattye filled his place. Since then she has been devoted to the church. She goes from Des Moines to Promise City twice a week to preach Wednesday and Sunday evening sermons.

Dixon Veterans Ask
"Homeless" to Join
Local Organization

At the regular meeting of Dixon Post, 299, Grand Army of the Republic, Saturday, the veterans of the Civil War took action to enable old soldiers in Lee, Ogle and Whiteside counties who have been deprived of postal accommodations because of the rapidly thinning ranks of the organization, to affiliate with the Dixon Post. The action was taken by the unanimous adoption of a resolution providing "that Dixon Post No. 299, Dept. Ill., G. A. R., cheerfully invites any and all old comrades in good standing in Lee, Ogle and Whiteside counties, whose posts are unable to function or have surrendered their charters, to affiliate with us. No fees for membership; only the years dues of $1 in advance."

Sarver Was Not Behind
Wheel of Wrecked Car

The Telegraph is informed by Lee Sarver that data given this paper concerning an automobile accident near the viaduct on Route 2, south of the city last Wednesday was in error, in that the car which was damaged was not his and he was not driving it. He states that the driver was in the car, which was owned by Samuel Shook and was driven by William Kohl.

JUDGE ATTEMPTS TO MUZZLE NEWS-PAPERS IN MISS.

Orders Them to Keep Still About Trial of Two Men

Bay St. Louis, Miss., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Although Circuit Judge White announced that a cell in the Hancock county jail awaited any newspaper reporter who makes public any testimony or purported testimony in the trial this week of Jesse Favre, charged with murder, several newspaper representatives were preparing today to "cover" the hearing.

The judge holds that publication of "information or misinformation" concerning the case "would defeat the ends of justice."

He said news of the trial could be published after the court had considered it. One editor revealed that the vital portion of a story written for his weekly paper had been eliminated when submitted for court approval.

The ruling has stirred the community, with some citizens favoring it and others disapproving it. Favre's charged with the murder of William Hingee and J. H. McLenore, federal entomologists, whose bullet riddled bodies were found recently near Piquemine, Miss.

Scaffold Falls at Nettz & Co. Garage
Saturday Afternoon

A scaffold on which seven men were working on the interior of the Nettz & Company's garage, collapsed Saturday and fell a distance of about eight feet, piling the men up on the cement floor. Harvey Cupp sustained a fracture of the collar bone and sustained a deep cut on his hand; Charles Dierdorff sustained a wrench back, the others suffering bruises or abrasions in the fall.

The men were placing a metal ceiling in the new display room, the seven men being on the scaffold at one time and two more on the floor. The planking on the scaffold broke and slid, piling the workmen and heavy timbers in one pile on the cement floor. "That some of the men were not seriously injured is a miracle. One of the seven hung by his hands to a rafter of the ceiling when the crash occurred and later dropped to the floor. Those who were on the scaffold at the time were: Contractor Mark D. Smith, Walter Smith, Harvey Cupp, Charles Dierdorff, Ed Haas, Fred Hamberg and George Nettz.

LOCARDO TREATY
HELPS FRANCE
PREMIER STATES

Russian-German Alliance Prevented by it He Declares

Paris, Mar. 1.—(AP)—If France had not signed the Locarno security pact and arbitration treaties, she would one day have found herself isolated in the face of an alliance between Soviet Russia and Germany, Premier Briand told the Chamber of Deputies this morning during the debate on the Locarno ratification bill.

"Locarno was imposed by events," the premier declared. He emphasized that France's security was in no wise diminished by the Locarno accords and added:

"France has given proof of her peaceful spirit. France has suffered overly much from calumnies on her alleged military intentions. She has paid dearly for them. When a country is shielded from all suspicion, just or unjust, it ought to profit thereby."

Two of the deputies exchanged Darwinian amenities when M. Marin, leaving the topic of Russia branched off to discussion of the "darker" from Germany. Deputy Uhry interrupted the speaker, whereupon Deputy Boulton ejaculated: "Silence, you descendant of a monkey."

"We all have the same origin," M. Uhry quickly retorted. "But if I descend from the monkey, you are going back to that state."

The chamber broke into laughter, relieving the nervous tenacity of the debate.

Water Diversion Suit
Brings Numerous Briefs

Washington, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Another brief, adding to the many such documents, growing out of the Chicago Lake Drainage case, was filed in the supreme court today by the attorneys general of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

It opposed a motion of Illinois and the Chicago Sanitary District which had urged the court to dismiss a suit brought to restrict diversion of water from Lake Michigan. The four attorneys general asserted that while neither Illinois nor the United States could legally authorize the diversion of water from the Great Lakes to another water shed for any purpose, they only asked that the diversion be restricted to the actual needs for navigation through the Lakes to the Gulf Waterway.

COMING ILLINOIS
PRIMARY ASSUMES
NATIONAL IMPORT

McKinley's Vote for the World Court Has Started Fight

BULLETIN

Chicago, March 1.—(AP)—The Chicago Journal said today that working agreements had been reached with a view to swinging the Illinois republican delegation to the next national convention, to Senator William E. Borah, as a "native son." The senator was born in Fairfield, Ill.

The Journal said that the prospect of support from the Illinois delegation for the 1928 presidential nomination was a big factor in a decision of Senator Borah to make speeches for Frank L. Smith, candidate against Senator McKinley for the republican senatorial nomination in the primaries of April 13. Senator Borah on a recent speech making tour in the mid-west fraternized with local republican faction which is supporting Col. Smith and which includes States Attorney Robert E. Crowe and former Mayor William H. Thompson, who were formerly political enemies.

This Journal also declared that George E. Brennan, democratic national committeeman from Illinois, and a leader of the Al Smith forces at the 1924 national democratic convention would announce his candidacy for senator tomorrow.

Chicago, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Illinois' primary April 13 has leaped into international importance.

The invasion last week of two United States Senate opponents of adherence to the World Court with demands that the primary, one of the first since the senatorial die was cast, be made a test of public sentiment has elevated it far above its usual status.

The visitors, William E. Borah, Republican, Idaho, and James A. Reed, Democrat, Missouri, studiously avoided reference to Senator William E. McKinley, candidate for re-election to the highest office involved in the primary, but no one doubted the Missouriian had in mind, for one, the McKinley poll when he advised Donnybrook Fair tactics in disposing of those who voted to enter the court.

"Wherever you see a head, hit it," he suggested.

Borah was even more reticent when it came to mentioning names in three speeches here, but since he returned to Washington, he has been hinted openly that he will return to Illinois to make at least two campaign speeches for Frank L. Smith, chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission, who has been waging a strenuous fight against Senator McKinley for the republican nomination.

Mr. Smith made one of the chief issues Senator McKinley's known advocacy of the World Court prior to the Senate vote, and since the vote, has gained the assistance of national figures.

To Help McKinley

That Senator McKinley would not rest contented with referring to the Borah-Reed visits as meddling outsiders which would be resented "by thinking people of the state," was seen in his statement after a conference with President Coolidge that he thought it likely some cabinet members and administration supporters would speak in Illinois before the primary.

Herbert Hoover, the secretary of commerce, has an engagement to speak in Chicago, March 2.

Senator Joseph Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas, will speak at East St. Louis, Ill., March 16.

Borah's return for speeches for Smith at Peoria and Springfield depends upon whether dates upon which he can be away from Washington are found.

Meanwhile party leaders are going about their business of perfecting tickets in the race for nominations for twenty-six state Senate seats, the entire 153 places in the lower house of the general assembly, and the various county offices.

The Cook County (Chicago) slate-making has taken the most conspicuous place in political news to date, second only to the McKinley-Smith contest, with two democratic and three republican factions announcing tickets.

Reserve Dry Question

The prohibition question has been reserved chiefly for the campaign after the primary, with the Democrats planning to take a decided stand against the present law at their state convention at Springfield April 23.

According to plans being made by Thomas H. Donovan, Joliet attorney, newly elected chairman of the Democratic state central committee, the state convention will be made the starter for an aggressive statewide campaign for modification of the prohibition law.

Two of the Republican congressional nomination fights involve the prohibition law, with it likely to bob up in other contests before the primary.

Sidney M. Ward, judge of the Franklin County court, announced his candidacy on a platform favoring the law.

MISS WILLS AND LENGLEN NOT TO MEET TILL JUNE

French Star to Play No Singles Until Then, She Says

Monte Carlo, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Helen Wills, having emerged victorious from the Monte Carlo lawn tennis tournament, enjoyed another rest today. She is entered in the Mentone tournament, opening today, but drew a bye in the first round.

Suzanne Lenglen has sent in her entry for the doubles competition for the "Cup of Nations" in which she is paired with Henri Cochet. Suzanne has her name on the cup twice and it will become her possession if she wins this year.

Miss Wills is not entered in the cup event, as she was unable to find an American partner expert enough to give her a chance of victory against the other pairs.

Miss Lenglen is not entered in the women's or mixed doubles so there is no chance of her meeting Miss Wills during the Mentone play. After the cup play she will lay down her racket until June and perhaps until Wimbledon.

LENGLEN GOES TO ITALY

Nice, France, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Suzanne Lenglen left for Italy this afternoon for several weeks rest. Her physical condition is such that she has abandoned the idea of playing in the Mentone lawn tennis tournament, even in the doubles for the "Cup of Nations," although she would have needed but one more victory for permanent possession of the trophy.

GERMANS WIN DOUBLES

Monte Carlo, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Frua Noppach, the German woman tennis star, and Herr Kehring won the first in the mixed doubles of the lawn tennis tournament here today defeating Mike Ciano and Baron de Morpurgo of Italy 5-7, 6-0, 6-4.

Farm Profits Steadily
Declining Says Board

New York, Mar. 1.—(AP)—The National Industrial Conference Board has completed an agricultural survey of the United States, in which it finds that farm profits are steadily declining, production is lagging in inverse ratio to the growth of population, and that the farmer's expenses rise faster than the prices he get for his products.

"Farm exports show a distinct downward trend since 1909," the board reported, "while agricultural imports are increasing. The farmer's weakened position in meeting foreign competition is said to have resulted from a tendency of his expenses to rise more rapidly than the prices he receives for his products."

The average annual farm return, it was pointed out, in the last five years was $690, after allowing a nominal return on capital invested including food, fuel and shelter. The increase in the cost of living has reduced the farmer's income to four per cent below that of 1914.

Judge Harry Edwards in DeKalb Circuit Court

Sycamore.—In a hearing in the DeKalb county circuit court, Judge Harry Edwards of Dixon heard arguments concerning the case of I. S. Evans versus William Frederick, which dealt with a contract following the sale of some Texas lands.

Master in Chancery E. M. Burst found against the complainant in his suit to annul the contract. The matter was appealed to the court and Judge Edwards affirmed the finding of the Master in Chancery.

This action was first instituted several years ago and has reached the stage where it has become rather complicated to the average layman.

OFFICIALS AND GANGSTERS SIT
AROUND BANQUET

So Better Government Association Asks U. S. to Take Hand

Chicago, Mar. 1.—(AP)—The Rev. E. L. Williams, director of law enforcement for the Better Government Association of Chicago, returning today from Washington where he presented a petition seeking a congressional investigation of crime in Chicago, declared that the petition "was prepared by himself without the assistance of politicians."

"I conferred with neither Senator McKinley nor Senator Deneen," he said. "As a matter of fact Senator Deneen was ill and was not in the senate last Saturday and Senator McKinley was not in Washington."

"The banquet picture printed this morning by the Chicago Tribune shows the best reason why I would not have conferred with either side. It shows men from both factions seated at the tables."

Those Seated at Table

Jim Genna, three of whose brothers recently have been slain in gangster warfare; L. L. Emmerson, secretary of state; Robert E. Crowe, States Attorney; Lieut. Governor Sterling, Judge F. E. Carpenter of Rockford, Illinois; Joseph Haas, county recorder; Oscar Nelson, state auditor; Judge Jonas of the Municipal Court; "Diamond Joe" Esposito, restaurateur and Italian-American leader; Judge Bernard Baranen, formerly of the municipal court and Samuel Erickson, clerk of the superior court, were some of those seated at the speaker's table.

The petition sets forth that State's Attorney Crowe was a guest at a banquet given by the Genna brothers and other gangsters in October, 1924 to which Mr. Crowe replied Saturday that the Rev. Mr. Williams and the Better Government Association were incapable of telling the truth. He coupled Esposito who also issued a statement connecting Crowe with the Gennas.

Issues Open Warning

The Better Government Association issued an open warning to Crowe that it expected "to produce evidence to substantiate every essential statement contained in the congressional petition."

The association alleged that Tony Genna, recently slain gangster, contributed $5,000 and John Scalls, now on trial for murder in connection with the slaying of two policemen when Mike Genna was slain, contributed $75 toward the banquet.

The dinner, according to the Tribune, "actually, according to a variety of responses, was laid by the Italian republican club as a testimonial to certain officials and candidates."

A second picture printed in the Tribune showed a banquet scene at the christening of "Diamond Joe" Esposito's son November 15, 1925. Among those in the picture were: Senator C. S. Deneen; John F. Devine, candidate for city treasurer; J. A. Haas, recorder; J. T. Healy, a Deneen adherent; Judges John H. Richardson and A. M. Eberhardt; former Judge C. A. Williams and Esposito.

Mr. Crowe held Senator Deneen responsible for the introduction of the petition

Employment Bureau at Y Serves Definite Need

One of the departments of the "Y" which is not heard much of but which is constantly at work, is the employment bureau, more particularly for boys. The merchants of the city are more and more using this service and when any man or firm wants to hire a boy, either for an hour or two or permanently, he phones the "Y."

Saturday is an example of what is being done. During the day, six calls were answered and within a half hour of each call, a boy was sent to the job. This means that six boys were at work Saturday who otherwise would not likely have had the opportunity of helping himself financially. When a boy is placed in a permanent position, more time is taken to search out the right boy, for not only does the local "Y" endeavor to find a boy specially adapted for the work, but the "Y" follows that boy to see that he is making good.

REVERIE AT GLENMARY—
I have enough, O God! My heart to-night

Runs over with its fulness of content; And as I look out on the fragrant stars, And from the beauty of the night take in My priceless portion—yet myself no more Than in the universe a grain of sand—I feel His glory who can make a world.

Yet in the lost depths of the wilderness Leave not a flower unfinished! Rich, though poor! My low-roofed cottage is this hour a heaven.

Music is in it—and the song she sings, That sweet-voiced wife of mine, arrests the ear

Of my young child awake upon her knee; And with his calm eyes on his master's face, My noble hound lies couchant—and all here—

All in this little home, yet boundless heaven. Are, in such love as I have power to give, Blessed to overflowing

Thou, who look'st Upon my brimming heart this tranquil eve, Knowest its fulness, as thou dost the dew

Sent to the hidden violet by Thee. And as that flower, from its unseen abode, Sends its sweet breath up, duly to the sky,

Changing its gift to incense, so oh, God, May the sweet drops that to my humble cup Find their far away from heaven, send up, to Thee, Fragrance at Thy throne welcome.

—Nathaniel Willis.

Suspecters soon will become as popular with women as they have been with men said Miss Elsie V. Davis of New York, authority on women's dress.

The women's type of "galusses" will be much the same as those used to hold up trousers, but will be much fancier in design Miss Davis predicted.

Recent reports from Converse College South Carolina said the girls there had adopted suspenders as part of the official campus regalia.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—
Shredded pineapple, eggs scrambled with rice, peach muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—
Baked oysters, lettuce sandwiches, canned peaches, hermits, milk, tea.

Dinner—
Baked haddock, egg sauce, shoe string potatoes, hot French slaw, buttered radishes, orange cream pudding, graham bread, milk, coffee.

Children under ten years of age may be served the fish, bread, milk and dessert of the dinner menu. If it's at all practicable for small children to have their hearty meal at noon time it should be done and the hearty, unhurried breakfast must be accomplished. This makes it possible to serve little people a simple easy-to-sleep-on supper of bread and milk, cereals, light vegetables and plain desserts.

Health Muffins.

One cup whole wheat flour, 2 cups bran, 1 cup butter milk or sour milk, 1/2 cup molasses, 1 cup seeded and chopped raisins, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Combine flour, bran, salt and raisins. Add molasses and half the milk and mix well. Dissolve in remaining milk and add to first mixture. Beat well and drop from tip of spoon into buttered and floured muffin pans. Bake thirty minutes in a hot oven. (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

Bandages.
For home made bandages, tear old linen into stripes two to four inches wide, lap the ends two inches and sew together. Make in lengths from one-half to five yards. Pull away ravelings, roll smoothly and fasten. Then place clean pebbles in the bottom of a glass, cover with paper and place bandages inside. Fill the jar with absorbent cotton, and set jar in cold water on stove. Water should reach neck of jar. Bring to a temperature of 180 degrees for at least three hours, then cap jar securely.

Foot-Pad.
A pad of cloth two feet square and stuffed to one and one-half inches thick, tacked flat, makes an excellent foot-pad on which to stand when ironing or preparing food. It saves the strength and prevents cool feet.

The WOMAN'S DAY by Allene Sumner

The Baby.

Use balance, not spring, scales. Weigh child shortly before meal and at same time each day. Until baby is three months old he should be weighed every day. After that, three times a week until he is one year old is enough. The weight record tells the story of baby's health.

The average girl baby weighs seven pounds and five ounces at birth. The average boy weighs seven pounds and eight ounces. Do not be alarmed if the baby loses about one-tenth of its birth weight by the time it is five days old.

The normal baby generally doubles its birth weight by the time it is five months old and triples it at the age of one year.

Making "Pin Money."

Frances Flados, a girl at the College of Industrial Arts, Texas, had to earn her way through school. She opened an "eats shop" in a tiny yellow shop which she had built in the shape of an orange. She is "buying" it at the rate of $8 a month "rent."

Frances sells sandwiches, popcorn, candy, gum, apples, oranges, and takes in $10 a day with monthly expenses of only $25.

The moral would seem to be that a novel idea fitted to the right location is a money maker.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

Our morning's lesson, brides, run thusly—"Keep your garters on when you see his secretary!"

And this rule holds even if she be like unto Venus or Dolly Dimples or old Cleo herself for pulchritude!

Yes, I know, you've read all those fine alarms about "daytime wives."

You've been told by one Granny Gamp or another that propriety is of the mother of love affairs, and that

No, this worried about "daytime wives" has been out of date for some time! Wives are the winners just because they aren't in quite such constant evidence as the office worker!

As for good-looking secretaries, try to find 'em any other way! In America, the land of the free and the beautiful office girl, there's no such product in this age of permanent waves, chiffon hose, and French perfume!

MARGIN OF SAFETY.

The annual number of automobile traffic fatalities is growing, according to a report of the national conference on street and highway safety, with headquarters at Washington, but the rate of increase declined greatly in the past two years.

The decline in rate of increase is cited as proof that efforts toward traffic safety are beginning to be effective, in spite of the increase of motor transportation. In the last analysis the problem is up to each individual, whether driver or pedestrian, for nearly all accidents can be traced directly to fault by one or both parties concerned.

There are a certain number of people, especially children, who are not completely responsible in a competitive sense, and that fact throws a heavier obligation upon others. Perhaps the situation could be improved greatly by increasing the margin of safety demanded by law and custom.

In building operations, in handling epidemics and in other matters of concern to the general public a wide margin of safety is dictated by experience and sustained by custom. In regulating the handling of motor vehicles and the rights of pedestrians we are inclined to place unwarranted confidence in the judgment of individuals, based in the abilities of the most responsible.

ONE WAY TO LIVE LONG.

Don't wed before 60, advises William Smith of Ireland. Eat a lot of plain food, drink a little alcohol daily. Don't get up too early, and don't worry.

William claims to be 125 years old. He lives alone in a shack in Ulster. He has an income of $1.25 a week, old age pension, and this provides him with no more than one bottle of stout every payday. In the days of greater activity he preferred rum, but he finds considerable comfort in his pipe.

So far as long life is concerned, William may be a success. His methods seem satisfactory, providing one's objective is the same as Mr. Smith's.

Following his advice most of us would not marry before 60, or after. The trouble is that most young men do not want to wait until they are 60 before marrying, and few young ladies could be expected to delay so important an event to suit the convenience of a philosopher. Another objection is that it is very difficult to secure a lot of plain food and little alcohol daily by rising late and not worrying.

William may have explained how he lived 125 years, but not why.

EXPANDING KNOWLEDGE.

Recent excavations at Visby, on the island of Gothland in the Baltic sea, reveal that the site has been used at least 4,000 years. It is now especially rich in ruins of the middle ages.

Time and renewed explorations and discoveries tend to prove that such history as is recorded is the merest framework upon which science will write the record as revealed. Perhaps it is more than chance that these revelations keep pace with the capacity to receive.

TERRIBLE.

Another blow at romance!

Many a love song has been written about supposedly romantic gondolas of Venice; many a love story has used the city of canals for its setting.

But now—just think of it—a Venetian gondola "chauffeur" asked the police to arrest a couple for kissing in his gondola. The man who did the kissing was locked up for four days.

What are gondolas for anyway?

Venice seems sadly in need of a Florida publicity agent.

The world champion Pittsburgh Pirates have left for California to begin spring training, which means that it is almost time for the winter tourists to be coming home and getting ready for the ball season.

After all, if Helen should manage to defeat Suzanne, France might have another excuse for not paying us. It would be difficult to imagine just how such an incident could be used, but France has tried everything else and could be trusted to find a way.

Counterfeit United States $20 bills are being forged in central Europe, which shows a good business head. One would imagine, however, that the market for $20 bills would be rather limited.

Harry Lauder plans to retire to his home in Scotland and appear only occasionally in the future, not leaving his own country. That may be Harry's gain, but it is the world's loss.

If the principles applied to the Cathcart case were taken seriously by American society this would be the year of the great exodus.

Nobody knows the actual results of prohibition, because it is practically impossible to describe a modern morning after.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

THE ELEVATOR TO CHINA

Suddenly Nick called out, "What do you know about that?"

"No, sir, you can't get past," snapped the big bat that blocked the road, so that Nancy and Nick could not get past. "Not until you get me a bushel of Jersey mosquitoes, a bushel of Chinese dragon flies, and a bushel of fuzzy caterpillars with their hair cut. I must lay in my winter supplies."

At this, the kangaroo, looked at the wins and the Twins looked at the bat and Nick. The wooden man, looked at everybody. Nobody knew what to do. There was the enormous bat stretched across the road, and there wasn't any more chance of getting past him than there is of me having six kinds of ice cream for dinner (I know very well we're going to have rice pudding).

Even Paddyfoot, the mouse, riding in the kangaroo's pocket, didn't know what to do.

But after all, it was Paddyfoot who had the first idea.

"Say," he said, "Hickydoo is supposed to know everything. Why don't we look in his index and see what it says about Jersey mosquitoes and Chinese dragon flies and fuzzy caterpillars?"

"That's a very good idea, indeed," said Hickydoo. "Press my second button, Nick, and when the drawers spring out, find the 'B's' and then look for 'bugs.' That tells everything."

"I don't care where you look," said the big blue bat crossly. "But be careful you don't look for 'wasps.' If I get my nose stung again, I shan't answer for what may happen."

Nick pressed the second button in Hickydoo's wooden jacket and out slid a drawer with several bundles of papers in it.

Nick took out a bundle marked 'B' and looked for 'Bugs.' "Here it is," he cried. "It tells all about everything. Jersey mosquitoes live in New Jersey. Chinese dragon flies live in China, and fuzzy caterpillars live in orchards."

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

CATASTROPHE

I thought I was going to faint. I knew that my bag had been there on the table before me just the minute before. Then I remembered that a particularly flashy man had stopped at my table as though to speak to me and I had turned my face away for fear that he would oblige me to make some sort of a demonstration before he could be persuaded to leave.

Frankly I looked about the table and room, before I realized how silly it was, for I knew positively that the man had taken my bag.

Then it seemed to me that everything except despair had gone out of this world. I upbraided myself for doing such a foolish thing as drawing my money out of the bank, and then I forgot everything except the fact that I was in a strange town, penniless and alone.

Unsteadily, I got up from the table and made my way to the dressing room. I had grown panic-stricken at the thought that I had no place to lay my head that night, for I did not dare go back to the hotel and tomorrow morning have to tell them that I had not a cent in the world.

A feeling of nausea crept over me and I fell down in a chair. The dressing room attendant came up to me and said:

"What's the matter, dearie?"

"Oh, how I hate that word 'dearie.' I disliked it before, but when I found my money was gone it seemed as though I could not bear it."

Finally I managed to tell the woman that I had lost my money.

"Never mind," she said. "I'll give you a nickel to call your family on the telephone and then they can come after you."

I thanked her but found it impossible to make any explanation and with a great effort of will I managed to rise and bathe my face in cold water.

While I was doing this, the attendant was called to the door and I heard her say:

"Yes, I think the young lady is in here. She says she's lost her money."

My heart sank lower than ever at this. I realized it was the waiter and that I owed for my dinner and could not pay.

The attendant came back and said:

"Your dessert is waiting, miss."

"I don't want any dessert," I answered wildly.

The woman looked at me suspiciously. I thought and she said again:

"Don't worry, dearie. I'll loan you the nickel to telephone your friends."

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Bible reading and meditation prepared for Commission of Evangelism of Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Read Jn. 6:16-21. Text: 6:20. It is I, be not afraid.

Meditation—Darkness falls upon us. A storm of adversity and injustice overwhelms us. Difficulty like a great wind drives us back. The loss of our goods or of reputation seems to us irreparable. We are sore afraid—but in that very storm the Master comes to us and to bless. "Before I was afflicted I went astray." "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." As soon as we see that He is behind the grim circumstances we are at last unfrightened and free.

"Away despair, my gracious Lord doth hear. Though winds and waves assault my keel, He doth preserve it; He doth steer. Ev'n when the boat seems most to reel, Storms are the triumph of His art."

Young vigor to old folks

"Six years ago had nerves, sleeplessness, constipation, and headaches had me run down."

"Tanlac sent my weight up fifteen pounds and now, at sixty-seven, I feel fine as at forty."

W. H. Stearn, 1211 North Oakland Av., Indianapolis, Ind.

One of Tanlac's greatest blessings is the new life and vigor it brings to old folks. Every day men and women up in the seventies and eighties thank us for Tanlac's wondrous benefits.

Tanlac is a natural tonic, made from roots, barks and rare herbs. Harmless to man or child. It cleans the blood, stirs up the liver and puts digestive organs in working order.

"If your body is weak and run-down, if you lack ambition, can't eat or sleep, you'll be delighted with Tanlac's results. Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation."

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING

Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service

The removal of foreign bodies lodged in the white of the eye is a difficult process. Particles of steel are frequently embedded in the eye in this locality. It may be difficult for you to see these minute particles. Often a magnifying glass is necessary.

After the object is seen a very small particle of cotton may be firmly wrapped around the point of a clean toothpick and moistened with clean water. It may be possible, by having the patient look steadily at some object to hold the lids apart and remove the foreign body in this way.

Frequently, however, the body will be too firmly embedded to be extracted by this procedure. Such cases require the services of a physician. Pending the arrival of the doctor both eyes should be closed, small pads of cotton placed over them and a handkerchief tied over the eyes and around the head. This precaution will prevent motion of the eyeball and prevent further damage.

Foreign bodies are occasionally introduced into the ears and may be a source of a great deal of discomfort and pain. Insects frequently get into the ear. An insect in the ear may be removed by turning the head to one side and filling the ear with lukewarm sweet oil poured into it with a spoon. The oil will suffocate the insect and it will float out. For the removal of other objects a physician should in all cases be employed.

There has been a marked decrease in the number of cases of typhoid fever since 1900. By looking backward over the course of progress in disease prevention within the last quarter of a century much cause may be found for gratification and encouragement.

Typhoid fever has had a prominent place in the hills of mortality over all civilized countries. From time to time over wide areas it has prevailed as a veritable scourge. In some of the wars of modern times it has killed more than were killed by bullets.

The cause of typhoid is a microscopic plant, or germ as it is called, so small that the individual members can be seen only with the aid of a high-power microscope. Minute as it is, this plant, like other plants, depends for its existence upon favorable soil. The favorable soil upon which it grows is human tissue.

How Germ Lives

Outside of the human body it does not live for a prolonged period of time. Various investigators have reported that the typhoid bacillus may live for 12 days in crude sewage, four months in butter, five days in home-made cheese, and 39 days in ice cream.

It reaches human tissue by being swallowed. Once it has been swallowed by a susceptible person and finds its way into the tissues of that human being, it multiplies rapidly and produces a condition known as typhoid fever.

The germ of typhoid fever is discharged from the body of the infected person in the waste material from the intestines and the kidneys. Under unsanitary conditions, such waste material may be conveyed to other persons through the media of water, food, on fingers or by flies.

Cutting the Rate.

Most of the reduction in the prevalence of typhoid fever in the United States during the last 26 years has resulted from sanitary progress in the cities.

In our rural communities, which are the source of our food supply and now also the source of most of our typhoid fever infection, sanitary progress is being made slowly and in spots. The lack of rural sanitation is of critical importance locally and should be a matter of national concern.

The typhoid fever rate can be cut in the country just as it has been in the cities if local health authorities are provided with facilities for carrying on the necessary campaign of education, and we could partake of our food such as milk, lettuce and other raw vegetables with a much greater degree of safety.

Is this your BIRTHDAY

MONDAY, MARCH 1

If so, you will have many friends because you have the characteristics of one having many sincere and true friends.

You should pay particular attention to your health as you are inclined to be rather delicate.

You will live longer, however, than many persons who appear in much better physical condition than yourself.

Your ability to shun worry will have a lot to do with your fighting to get your health in good shape.

ELEANOR DEMENT, FORMER DIXONITE, AUTHOR OF NOVEL

"Story of an Unfamed Hero" to be Published May First

N. Eleanor Dement, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Henry D. Dement of Memphis, for many years residents of Dixon, and herself a native of this city, has just completed a novel, "The Story of an Unfamed Hero," for which her publisher, The Morehouse Publishing Co. of 1801-11 Fond du Lac Ave., Milwaukee, predicts great success. In advance announcement of the novel, which will be ready May 1, the publisher says of the book and Miss Dement:

This book is the story of a boy-prisoner, not innocent of the crime for which he finds himself in prison, but with great possibilities in his nature, which are developed better, perhaps, under adversity than they would have been by success. Since this is his first and only offense, he does not consider himself "of the criminal class," and at first he despises his fellow-prisoners. He knows that he was pushed into a corner by the unscrupulous, and that his crime was the unpunished result, on his part, of a sudden, fortuitous combination of circumstances. He despises the other prisoners as being like the kind of unscrupulous people who pushed him into a corner. He thinks of them as all alike, with no light and shading in their characters. He pictures to himself all their crooked work, by which they have run up a high score of crime for themselves. He resents being "herded" in with them.

It takes time and experience and a good deal of suffering with them to give him a fellow-feeling for them. Faith in human nature, even in some of the poorest specimens of it, triumphs in the end. He discovers how much of the interesting there is in some of these strangely distorted lives, how many Jacks-of-all-trades and how many odd geniuses there are hidden away here with plenty of energy, but with their energy misdirected.

ed. They are usually shy and ashamed of their good acts and better impulses, but they have the same feelings as other men: like Shylock, if you prick them, they will bleed; if you tickle them, they will laugh. In short, daily contact with them shows him the human side of convicts.

In the story we have the inward struggle of a boy who passes through some of the hardest experiences in life without lowering his ideals or allowing himself to be beaten in spirit; instead he thinks himself out from a pagan into a high Christian philosophy of life.

When he comes into prison he believes in neither God nor man, and thinks that life is nothing but the supremacy of the strong. In the hardness of his heart and indifference of spirit, many are the rebuffs dealt to the kindly chaplain who is really one man in a thousand, and who insists upon becoming his warm friend. Through the efforts of the chaplain, with the change that is wrought in his feeling for man, as he sees "man" in the convicts around him, comes a corresponding change in his feeling for God. By looking for the best in them he finds some many qualities in these supposed archvillains like those of the Superman, the Christ. He finally renounces everything dearest in life to him for one of these convicts whom he at first despised.

In the prison chosen for portraiture in this book there are no executions or extreme cruelties. There is enough to be said about convicts without that and all of it founded on fact. Strange as it may seem, there are sometimes experiences in the cells of prisoners transcending those of our daily life.

The author, N. Eleanor Dement, was born in Dixon, on Rock River, in one of the loveliest corners of Illinois. During two administrations, when her father was Secretary of State of Illinois, and again when he was Warden of the Joliet Prison, she saw not a little political life that she absorbed at every pore.

Educated at Smith College, the University of Chicago and Oxford University, she took her degree of Bachelor of Philosophy at the University of Chicago and did two years of graduate work there in literature and sociology. From the University of Chicago she received a notice of high standing, honors in English, and Phi Beta Kappa. From Oxford university she received a certificate for "excellent work" and letters accrediting her with exceptional scholarship.

She was made an Honorary Member of the Society of Oxford Home Students and a University Member of the London Lyceum Club.

Like most novelists, she has had a wide range of experiences, which have given her a chance to study human nature in many different phases. For over ten years she was a teacher, chiefly of high school and college classes. One year was spent wandering around Europe, visiting the haunts of the poets and living at the Lyceum Clubs in the larger cities where there was a feast of the fine arts. Because the peasant holds the racial type the longest, in each country, she was seeking out the peasants, walking with them, talking with them, and all the time studying them in their native haunts. During the war her "bit" was to be Red Cross and United Charity work throughout the northwest section of Chicago. This proved a great opportunity to study peasant types of many different races as one finds them in juxtaposition here in America. Ethnologically, her book sounds a new note in the history of the novel.

ILLINOIS MAKES NEW RECORD FOR SWINE LITTERS

Census Reports Show It Ranks Second for Last Year

Washington, D. C.—Illinois ranks second among the farming states of the union in number of horses and swine and well up in number of cattle, further figures from the 1925 farm census disclose here.

There are now 1,032,058 horses on Illinois farms, a number exceeded only by that of Iowa, which has 1,191,954 horses. The Illinois census shows 62,541 colts under two years of age and 989,517 horses aged two years or more. There are also 168,520 mules owned by the farmers of the state.

Illinois at the time of the census had 4,863,379 hogs as compared with 5,687,001 in Iowa and 4,280,000 in Nebraska, these being the three leading swine raising states. Classified by age there were 1,768,655 pigs in Illinois under six months, 730,352 sows and gilts for breeding, six months old and over, and 1,864,392 hogs six months and older, including boars.

Cattle on the farms of the state numbered 2,245,224, of which 1,108,250 or approximately one-half were classified as dairy cattle. Iowa led Illinois in total number of cattle on her farms, with 4,372,298, but of these only 1,084,141 were dairy cattle.

STERLING'S VIEW OF DIXON HIGH'S VICTORY FRIDAY

Gazette Says the Sterling Team Was Off Form in Final Game

Here's the way the Sterling Gazette viewed the defeat of their high school basketball team by Dixon high school Friday evening. The Gazette's analysis of the battle is of especial interest, inasmuch as Sterling fans have been entertaining the belief that their team would triumph over Dixon and Rock Falls in the district tournament which opens there Thursday. The Gazette says:

The Dixon high school quintet put over a neat win on the Sterling township team in a hard fought battle on the local floor Friday evening. The Sterling team was way off form and when the final gun sounded Dixon had a score of 16 and Sterling 8. The Dixon second team defeated Sterling seconds, 15 to 8, in the preliminary game. There was the largest crowd of the season and the cheers of the fans and the music of the drum corps fairly rocked the building.

Basket shooting was the main factor in the Dixon win. Practically every shot that Dixon took at the basket in the first half dropped in, while on the other hand the Sterling boys couldn't sink the ball through the hoop. On a number of occasions the ball would round the ring and hop out or would strike dangerously near the hoop or the backboard, but it was almost impossible to drop the ball through the net.

At the end of the first quarter Dixon had accumulated 6 points and Sterling was blanked. At the half Dixon has increased its lead to 12 to 1. The local boys couldn't even get the free throws into the ring. Book making the single point for Sterling in the first half with a free throw and seven other attempts by various

How Skinny Kids Gain Needed Weight

Weak, undernourished, underweight boys and girls who are peevish, fretful and sickly need McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

Cod Liver Oil would do just as well, but what parent would so cruel as to give them the horrible, nasty, ill-smelling stuff when sugar-coated cod liver oil tablets made by McCoy's Laboratories of New York are as easy to take as candy and won't upset their delicate stomachs.

There's more vitamins of the first class in cod liver oil than in anything else and for that reason thin, scraggly, sickly children commence to live up and take on good healthy flesh after McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets have been taken for just a few days.

Be sure and ask Rowland's Pharmacy, Dixon and Rochelle, or any druggist for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets. If you want your delicate children to become strong, robust and active.

For grown-ups they are just wonderful—one woman gained 15 pounds in five weeks. 60 tablets 60 cents and if they don't put on 5 pounds of good firm flesh on any thin man or woman in 30 days, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

Three Women's Swimming Records Broken Sunday

Miami Beach, Fla., Mar. 1—(AP)—Three women's world swimming records were shattered here yesterday in concluding days program of an aquatic carnival at the Roman pools. Licensed officials checked the time in each.

Ethel Lackie of Chicago clipped one fifth of a second from the fifty yard swim record, negotiating the distance in 27.2 seconds.

Martha Norelius of the New York Women's Swimming Association, hung up two new records. She lowered the 220 yard record by six seconds, in covering the distance in two minutes 40.3 seconds. In the 440 yard swim she finished in 5 minutes 53.2 seconds, one and one fifth seconds better than the former record.

Some Intimate Stories About Norway's Flash

New York, March 1—(AP)—Charles Hoff, Norwegian all-around athlete, whose performances have been the sensation of the indoor track season here, didn't like pole vaulting and took it up under protest but today he stands in a class by himself in this specialty, holder of all world's records, indoors or out.

It was little more than four years ago that this slim, dark-haired youngster—then 19 and now only 23—first took a vaulting pole in his hands. Yet within less than a year he had soared to a world's record height, 13 feet, 6 inches. Since then he has improved his own mark four times until now it is 13 feet 11 1/2 inches.

Indoors, this "Vaulting Viking," adapting himself to new conditions and a strange setting, has shattered records with the same reckless abandon and in the brief space of a few weeks has captured the imagination of American fans as few athletes have ever done. Not even excepting that other Scandinavian product, Paavo Nurmi.

Hoff broke the indoor record with a vault of 13 feet, 1 inch in his first American appearance, at the Millrose games February 4 and has since steadily bettered this mark. His latest flight cleared the bar at 13 feet 4 inches.

W. Kralgsman, who serves as Norway's national track and field director, his coach and counselor.

"Most of my athletic experience had been in running, cross-country and jumping," Hoff explains. "I didn't like the idea of pole vaulting, but my coach was convinced I would make good at it. He thought my building and equipment suited to this event and finally persuaded me to try it. It wasn't long before I discovered that it was naturally easy for me and after that it was just a case of developing my form."

It was in September, 1922, that Hoff attracted the attention of the athletic world with his first record vault, 13 feet, 6 inches, made at Copenhagen, Denmark, and eclipsing by one inch the previous mark set by Frank K. Foss, old Cornell University star, in the 1920 Olympics.

She chronological story of Hoff's official record breaking since then is as follows:

1923 at Copenhagen—4.15 meters (13 feet, 9.34 in.)

1925 at Oslo, Norway—4.23 meters (13 feet, 9.34 in.)

1925 at Abo, Finland—4.25 meters (13 feet, 11.13-16 in.)

Langlen. "I am quite satisfied, especially over the improvement in my vaulting," the Californian said.

"From now on I will let up to a certain degree until Paris and Wimbledon."

Zack Wheat has capitulated. Offered $16,000 a year for a one year contract, or $14,000 if he failed to sign before tomorrow night, he accepted and all is harmony in Brooklyn's camp at Clear Water, Fla.

Gambling for high stakes and dice are taboo at Paso Robles, Calif., training camp of the world champion.

The man who thought a buggy was good enough

In the old days, a solid, conservative citizen might sniff and tell you you he didn't read advertising.

He didn't think so much of the horseless carriage, either. The telephone was new fangled, and an insult to the United States mails.

As for radio, aeroplanes, wireless photography—if they had been born then, he probably would have thought them a bit immoral.

But he's changed. He's been educated. His point of view has been made broader and more modern. He has been civilized—by the automobile, the telephone, radio, advertising.

Every single one has opened up new paths for him, taught him new things. Advertising, especially. Advertising tells him the newest things to wear, the best things to eat. Advertising tells his wife how to make a home up to date and attractive. Advertising tells him the prices to pay for things he buys, saves him from the old-fashioned ways of doing business—helps him live well, keeps him modern.

Advertising can help you. The advertisements in this newspaper are here to tell you many things that make life more comfortable, more interesting, happier. Read them faithfully. They'll keep you abreast of the times. They'll prevent you from becoming the type of old foggy who—sniff!—doesn't read advertising.

Advertising is the key to modernity.

SYNOPSIS
Prince Michael Yeredoff, wealthy philanthropist of Paris, tired of parasitical friends, falls honestly in love with Colette, an unworshiped girl, and rebuilds his worthwhile interest in life through befriending her. But he is saddened by the wretched condition of his young brother, Paul, who has been cruelly wronged for revenge by Dolores, one of Michael's cast-offs.

"No," Armand replied quickly. "Dolores went on—The pleasure of being his sister-in-law was denied me by one little trick of fate! Her beautiful face became tigerish. Never have I seen such a look in a woman's eyes. The joke," she said, "would have been entirely on Monsieur Michael. Tell him that it was through no fault of mine that I did not deliver him this blow. But I have crushed his young brother body and soul. I think that Michael will not have a pleasant time when he witnesses Paul's sufferings, for he was head over heels in love with me. Pray give His Highness that little message, if you will," she concluded with an ironic smile.

Armand paused for breath. In a moment he went on with all the enthusiasm of the male gossip. "I said to her, 'but why do you not deliver it to him yourself, if I may ask?' I was a little curious as to her reason for using me as a messenger, you know. She just laughed. 'I have not time, for I am about to leave for Spain to death or complete nervous collapse.

"So you are the one responsible for it all," he said hoarsely, slowly, a faint wave of color staining his cheeks. "I have to go through hell on your account. She said to ask you if it were true or not. She said that you would tell me. Now, is it true? Tell me, damn you, is it true?"

"No, no, Paul, of course not," Michael answered, without the faintest notion of what the question was, his whole thought being to soothe the boy into some semblance of calmness. "Brace up, old fellow!"

"You lie, you lie, I'll kill you!" Paul tried to leap out of bed and at Michael's throat, only to collapse. Michael caught him just in time to save him from falling to the floor.

"Telephone for Doctor Agnell," he whispered to Sergius, who hovered, frightened and excited, near the door.

The outburst seemed to subdue Paul a little; he lay back staring at the ceiling. Thinking that possibly he might drop off to sleep again, Michael tip-toed out of the room.

Sergius encountered him on the stairs: "The doctor will be over in ten minutes." Michael nodded, then gave Sergius orders not to go into the bedroom for fear of disturbing Paul but to wait and listen at hand nearby in the hall.

Michael returned to the library and to his brooding over the change in that lad upstairs from a happy, carefree companion, one who always wanted to be with him, one whose company he had always so enjoyed, to a haggard and worn out old man. For Paul looked years and years older. What hurt most was that Paul was poisoned against him and laid his plight at Michael's door.

A servant put a note on the desk before him, but he did not look up. After a little while, however, he found himself looking at the handwriting on the envelope and wondering who it was from? Then it all came to him—Colette had sent it as he had asked. He tore it open quickly.

There, in the middle of a great expanse of white paper, in small and dainty handwriting, the three magical words:
I love you. COLETTE.

He read it over and over. It seemed like a cool breeze, blowing the fevered thoughts from his brain.

Suddenly a noise rang out upstairs—a queer, hollow, brittle sound that blended into its own echo. Michael's heart seemed to stop beating. For an eternity he sat spellbound, tense. Then Sergius rushed into the room, his face white with horror.

"Monsieur Paul has killed himself!"
On a mild, sunny afternoon two months later a man could be seen wending his way through the narrow paths of the Cemetery du Pere-Lachaise, stopping at length before a tombstone which stood underneath a large willow tree whose leafy branches were spread as though in perpetual benediction on the eternal rest of the one buried there.

The mourner was Michael Yeredoff, upon whom sorrow had laid a heavy hand. The old Michael, the dashing, roistering fellow of the boulevards had completely gone. A quiet, serious man stood in his place. Quiet, because Paul's tragic death had left an indelible mark on him; serious, because he had cast aside his old life and consigned it to oblivion, and now looked resolutely to the future.

After a period of meditation and prayer, Michael slowly retraced his steps toward his car. At least, he was not alone in the world, he reflected, for he had Colette. Also, he had a faithful servant in Decline. For as a result of several long talks Michael had at last succeeded in breaking down Decline's distorted outlook on life with the result that the former Apache chief was now his chauffeur.

"I'll sit up in front with you for I want to chat," said Michael as he got into the car. Decline's face lit with pleasure.

Michael caught him just in time to save him from falling.

be near the only man I really love. I've had enough of Princes and puppy-loves!"

Michael sat still for a moment after Armand had concluded his message. Then he mused more to himself, then to his visitor:

"Pretty brutal, wasn't she? I wouldn't have cared if she had attacked me alone, but poor Paul has been the innocent victim all the way through. I've got to do my penance by restoring his happiness and making him forget, but I am afraid that it is going to go hard with him for I know his nature. I wonder how he will act towards me when he awakens?"

"Let us hope that he will be glad it is all over."

They talked a little while longer. Then Armand sensed that Michael wanted to be alone, and discreetly took his departure.

Michael remained alone in his library, plunged in thought.

"Well, at least I know the truth and thank God that her plans were frustrated and that she has gone," he reflected. "I wonder what the blunder was that prevented her from marrying him? She seems to have laid her plot so well, I am surprised that anything came up to spoil it."

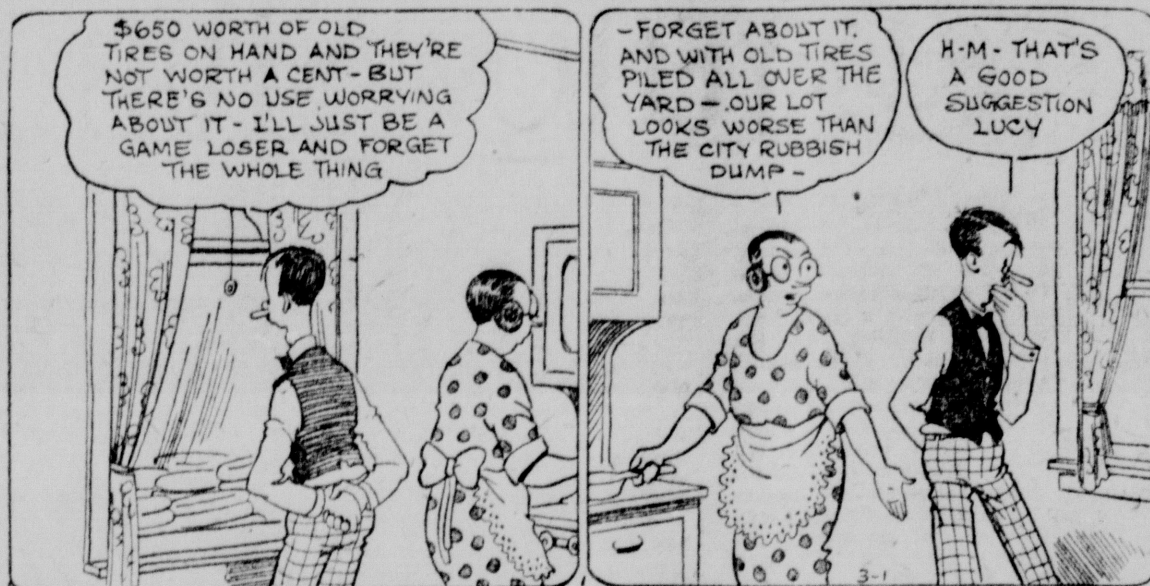

Sergius entered at this moment. "Monsieur Paul is awake, Monsieur," he announced.

Michael went up hurriedly to Paul's bedside. He was shocked at the deadness in Paul's eyes, the ravages of suffering in his face.

"My dear boy, my dear boy!" Michael soothed. "Sergius tells me you don't wish to have any food. Come now, you will feel much better if you'll take some soup. It will brace you up. Then after a refreshing bath, a little later on, you'll feel like a fighting cock again."

Paul stared fixedly at Michael, his eyes bright in that peculiar moment of sensitive lucidity that comes just before insanity or

The YELLOW STUB by Ernest Lynn

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HENRY RAND, middle-aged business man, expected home by his family to celebrate his son JIMMY'S 27th birthday, is found dead by police in a cheap hotel. The room is filled with gas. There is a welt on the back of his head.

The only clues are a woman's handkerchief and the stub of a yellow theater ticket from the Paragon Theater in Cleveland. Jimmy's sister, JANET, breaks her engagement with HARRY COLVIN for the murder and provides a place where you may borrow from $10 to $300 without having any one sign your note. Simply write us, giving address and amount wanted. Our representative will be in Dixon every Friday and will be pleased to call at your home and explain our plan in detail. HOUSEHOLD FINANCE CORPORATION, 206 Tarbox Bldg., Freeport, Ill. Telephone Main 137. 27412

Jimmy saves MARY LOWELL, a Cleveland girl, from the attentions of two mashers. The next night he and Mooney lay a trap for FOGARTY. They follow him to his hotel room.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IX

"COME," a deep bass voice spoke from the room.

Mooney turned the knob and slipped quietly into the room with Rand at his heels. They closed the door behind them and stood facing Fogarty.

He was sitting on the bed, tearing a letter from its envelope, and did not look up at once, obviously thinking a bell boy had come.

The utter silence in the room made him turn his head. He saw Mooney and Jimmy. The letter dropped from his grasp. He jumped to his feet. "Who the hell are you?" he demanded.

"Sit down, Fogarty," Mooney strode into the middle of the room and displayed his badge. "Nobody's going to start any rough stuff as long as you behave yourself. We want to ask you a few questions."

"You fresh dick, I'll have you busted for this!" The veins in Fogarty's fat neck swelled. His face turned several shades redder.

"All right," answered Mooney, "but wait till I get through. In the first place, Mr. Fogarty, did you ever hear of Henry Rand?" The little detective was watching Fogarty closely.

"Never heard of him," answered Fogarty. "Henry Rand of Grafton?" pursued Mooney, his eyes still on the other's face.

"No," Fogarty shook his head. "What's the game?" he asked angrily.

"Just this, Mr. Fogarty. A man by the name of Henry Rand—this man's father here," indicating Jimmy, "was killed in a hotel in Grafton last Wednesday. The room was engaged Tuesday night by a man who gave the name of H. A. Jones of New York. That man, by the way, had red hair," he said.

"What's this, a frame-up?" Fogarty gave a contemptuous laugh. "You'll have to come closer than that."

"I'm not through yet," continued Mooney. "In the room where the murder was committed they found a woman's handkerchief and the stub of a yellow ticket. Here's the ticket, Fogarty." He extracted the stub from his wallet and tossed it on the chair in front of Fogarty.

"See if you recognize it," Jimmy watched the big man intently as he picked up the yellow ticket stub and examined it. "By God," Fogarty exclaimed, "it's my ticket, all right."

In just that fleeting instant Jimmy told himself that his search was to go beyond Fogarty. This man, he decided, was not the murderer of his father. But undoubtedly he held the key.

Mooney smiled as he held out his hand for the stub. "Sure it's your ticket, Fogarty. And here's something else. That ticket was used last Monday night and the man who held it was in the Canfield Hotel in Grafton Tuesday night. Fogarty, you weren't in your room here Tuesday night. Where were you?"

Fogarty was sweating. He mopped his forehead with a huge handkerchief. "Tuesday night," he repeated. "I know," he exclaimed, his eyes lighting. "Tuesday night I was out playing poker with some of the boys in the Horseshoe Club. The game didn't break up until nine in the morning. I stopped to get something to eat and then came back here and went to bed."

"We'll check that story right now," said Mooney. "Rand, look in the phone book for the Horseshoe Club and give them a ring. Who Jimmy, with a gesture of the hands toward the bottle.

"No thanks, not just now," Fogarty poured himself a stiff drink, mixing it with ginger ale and ice.

"Mooney," he said, "I can't tell you how that ticket got in the room, because I didn't go to the theater that night. It might sound like a funny story to you, but I swear I gave that ticket away Monday afternoon."

He paused. "All right," snapped Mooney, "who did you give it to?"

"Mooney, I gave that ticket to a woman."

To Jimmy, who was listening in

Fogarty picked up the yellow stub and examined it. "By God," he exclaimed, "It's my ticket, all right!"

was with you?" he asked Fogarty. "Tell him to ask for Alec Blaine. He lives at the club. If he isn't there one of the porters can tell you."

"Try to get hold of Blaine," Mooney nodded to Jimmy, who was at the phone.

Jimmy had got his number. "I'd like to speak to Mr. Alec Blaine, please, if he's there." He turned to Mooney. "He's there. They're ringing his room."

"Here, let me talk to him," Mooney picked up the receiver. "Hello, Mr. Blaine? This is Tom Mooney talking—a friend of Tom Fogarty's. Tom's in a little trouble. I want to know from you when was the last time you saw him. You did, eh? What night?"

"Oh yeah. When did the game break up? ... What am I drivin' at? Ask Tom, he'll tell you."

He hung up the receiver. "Your story's good as far as it goes. Fogarty, although it'll take a lot more checking than that. Now suppose you explain how that ticket got in that room."

There was a knock at the door. "Come," called Fogarty. A bell boy deposited a tray bearing ginger ale and cracked ice and departed.

Fogarty opened a bureau drawer and pulled out a bottle. "Have a drink, Mr. May what's your name, anyway?"

"Mooney," answered the detective. "No, I don't drink."

"Mr. Rand?" Fogarty turned to tently, Fogarty's words were like a blow in the face.

"No, Fogarty," he cried. "It couldn't have been a woman that did this!"

"Wait a minute, Rand," Mooney ordered. "Let's hear this thing through." He opened the wallet. "This handkerchief," he said, "fits in some place. ... Go ahead, Fogarty."

Fogarty emptied his glass, his hand a trifle unsteady. "Here's all I know about it, Mooney," he continued. "Monday afternoon I happened to be passing the Paragon Theater and I went in and got my ticket for the show that night. Ordinarily I call for it in the evening just before the show starts, unless I'm ordering an extra seat."

"But I went in and got the ticket and looked around at the billboards in the lobby. It was a pretty good show, so they said—a musical comedy. It was a sellout."

"Well, I came back to the hotel and something turned up—I'll tell you about it later—that made it impossible for me to go to the show. I was thinking of turning in the ticket to the hotel porter when I met this woman. Olga Maynard, her name. I got to know her when she was singing in a cabaret in town here. I knew she was down on her luck—she'd lost a couple of cabaret jobs for some reason or other—and I asked her if she could use the ticket."

"She's a good singer herself, and nuts about the stage. ... Got amblytions, I guess. Anyway, she took the ticket. That's the last I saw of her—and of the ticket, too, until you just showed it to me."

"How well do you know this Maynard woman?" asked Mooney.

"I've been out with her on a couple of parties. Not very well, I guess. I met her in a cabaret."

"Where is she working now?" "She isn't working." At least she wasn't when I talked with her Monday."

"What's the matter with her that she can't hold a job? You may show a good singer."

"I don't know, Mooney. Maybe they got something on her. Maybe it's just tough breaks. I don't know."

"Is she crooked?" asked Mooney. "You know what I mean, Fogarty. Is she a gold digger?"

"I can't tell you that, either. Personally, I'd always thought she was a pretty square shooter. But she might have got mixed up in some kind of scrape or other. I'd be wili-

TO SHOOT AIRPLANES

Washington, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Another stride in development of catapult devices to shoot navy aircraft directly into the air from decks of fighting ships was made here today when a three-seated Amphibian plane was launched in the face of a stiff wind with Secretaries Wilbur and Davis looking on.

The big plane was piloted by Lieut. E. F. Stone, coast guard, who cooperated with navy experts in development of the power type launching device and Lieut. W. M. Fellers of the navy rode as observer.

The catapult was mounted on a coal barge. With engines roaring the plane swept down the catapult track and leaped into air with hardly a dip. The power catapult type followed sixteen years of development in the American navy.

The large audience that gathered at the Methodist church Sunday night were not disappointed in either the song service or the sermon. Special music consisting of orchestra, cornet solo by F. J. Blocher, vocal solo by Miss Lorence Crum, song by the male quartet consisting of F. J. Blocher, L. V. Sittler, Chas. Sunday and Bela Halderman, along with the splendid congregational singing was most heartily enjoyed. After the song and praise service Rev. Sittler introduced the District Superintendent, Earnest C. Lumsden of Dixon, who delivered one of the best sermons we have heard in a long time.

Rev. Lumsden is an orator and a deep thinker. He never fails to please his audience. He is one of the best known field men of the state and his counsel has always been highly regarded by agent." Gasoline and Corn

A bushel of corn will buy more gasoline today than it would buy twelve years ago.

How much more?

Using as authority the latest statistics published by the United States Department of Agriculture, the question can be answered accurately.

The Monthly Crop and Market Bulletin gives the average farm price of corn, for 1913, as $.601 per bushel.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) average Chicago tank wagon price for gasoline, for the year 1913, was $.14837 per gallon. (For comparative purposes we select Chicago as a representative city of the Middle West.)

Thus it is shown that in 1913 one bushel of corn would buy 4.05 gallons of gasoline.

The average farm price for corn, during the year 1925, was $1.019 per bushel.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) average Chicago tank wagon price for gasoline was $.17276 per gallon.

Thus it is shown that in 1925 one bushel of corn would buy 5.89 gallons of gasoline, or 45.4% more than in 1913.

This fact speaks volumes for Standard Oil Company (Indiana) success in keeping down the price of gasoline, in the face of a constantly increasing demand.

This accomplishment involved the development of cracking processes which doubled the yield of gasoline from a given quantity of crude oil.

It is not too much to say that, when, a few years ago, this nation faced a shortage of gasoline that these processes saved the situation.

Without them the price of gasoline probably would have been double what it is today.

After developing these processes, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) did not keep them for its exclusive use. It leased them to competitors, that they also might get their bit in conserving an essential basic resource.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes that the farmer, particularly, appreciates its success and its persistent effort to keep the price of gasoline low.

Gasoline is essential to the business of farming. Without it, modern farm practice would be impossible and much of our up-to-date farm equipment would be useless. Without it, labor costs would advance enormously; crops would be jeopardized and the nation suffer.

Low price gasoline means cheap power and greater prosperity for the farmer. When the farmer prospers—we all prosper.
